Community Education Series: Measles

Learn more about measles and how vaccination can help protect you and your community.

The Wright Center for Community Health, in collaboration with Penn State Scranton, invites community members to a free educational presentation about measles.

Four senior nursing students from Penn State Scranton will discuss:

- What measles is and how it spreads
- Signs and symptoms of measles
- How measles can affect individuals and communities
- The importance of immunization and staying up to date on recommended vaccines

Friday, Oct. 2 | 3-4 p.m.

The Wright Center for Community Health Scranton

501 S. Washington Ave., Scranton, PA

Free and open to the entire community. No healthcare experience is required. Join us to learn, ask questions, and get informed about measles prevention.

Penn State Scranton

The Wright Center for Community Health

TheWrightCenter.org | 570-230-0019 |